MOTION TO SUPPLEMENT RULE 60(b) MOTION

Petitioner-Movant, Anthony Williams, in pro-se, moves this Honorable Court to consider supplemental authority in considering the merits of his previously-filed Rule 60(b) Motion to Reopen Habeas Proceedings, pursuant to the Federal Rules of Civil Procedure, and the following:

On or about December 16, 2015, Mr. Williams filed a Rule 60(b) motion with this Court attempting to re-open habeas proceedings. In the motion, Mr. Williams asserted he was entitled to tolling of the statute of limitations for the time he could have appealed the trial court's order, where he ultimately did appeal that order. Mr. Williams now presents to this Court a recent published decision that buttresses his argument.

In Scarber v Palmer, 808 F.3d 1093 (6th Cir. 2015), the Sixth Circuit just recently addressed an argument raised by the petitioner who argued he was entitled to tolling for the two three-week periods he could have filed motions for reconsideration of adverse Michigan Supreme Court orders. Id. The Court held the petitioner was not entitled to tolling where he failed to file any motions for reconsideration. ("...the AEDPA limitation period does not stop running for a petitioner who had the opportunity to, but did not, file a motion for reconsideration.") This reasoning was in the same vein as Taylor v Palmer, 2015 U.S. App. Lexis 14580 (6th Cir. August 14, 2015), which Mr. Williams relied upon in his 60(b) motion. Scarber, however, provides specific and authoritative language that supports Williams' assertion. Particularly, the Court stated:

Section § 2244(d)(2) burdens the petitioner with the responsibility of preserving a "pending" status of review by appealing (or, as was the case here, moving for reconsideration of) an otherwise final state-court order. Id.

This holding is essential to Williams' 60(b) argument, in that, after the trial court dismissed his motion for relief (a dismissal this Court deemed a final order), Williams subsequent October 31, 2016 motion qualifies as a "properly filed application for... review" under this reasoning. This subsequent review in the trial court, much like the opportunity for reconsideration in Scarber, preserved the "status" of the post-conviction proceedings, where there is no indication that the subsequent motion (application, summary, etc.) was not "properly-filed" and was ultimately addressed by the trial court as such an application. It's also important to note, this was a process dictated by the trial court, and at no point was Williams' filings considered untimely. see e.g., Evans v Chavis, 546 U.S. 189, 191 (2006)(a claim is "pending" during the time between an adverse lower-court determination and "the prisoner's filing of a notice of appeal," but only if "the filing of the appeal is timely.")

For these reasons, Mr. Williams moves this Honorable Court to allow him to supplement his Rule 60(b) Motion with newly published authority.

Respectfully submitted,

Dated: February 14, 2016.
